

Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München
Fakultät für Kulturwissenschaften
Institut für Volkskunde/Europäische Ethnologie
The feel good city/Dr. Asli Duru/SS14

Qingyang Xie, Theresa Garmaier, Efrossina Daltcheva, Linda Mutschlechner

The feel good city group portfolio (e)motions

The english garden in Munich on the 4th of Juli 2014: A little boy enjoying the sunny day with his dad. He is kicking the ball with his whole power , lying his whole heart into this one kick with a children likely motivation. Motion is for us always connected with emtions and it starts on our first day of life.

Outside Olympia Center on the 3rd of July: the little child wants to throw the ball into the basket, but he isn't tall enough. The father is about to hold him slowly up to the basket so he can throw the ball inside and score. It's a slow motion filled with the emotion of love and care. There is another pair of father and son in the background playing tennis together.

On the basketball field outside Alte Pinakothek on the 3rd of July: a group of young people are playing basketball. Although they are in casual everyday clothes, they are very focused on the game, doing their best to chase the ball. In background you can see the red brick building of the art museum. The motion of basketball and the intense atmosphere of a basketball game offer an interesting contrast with the quiet and calming Alte Pinakothek.

The english garden on the 4th of July: A young woman, who escapes probably regularly from her everyday life into running. Doesn't matter if its fear, anger, stress or sadness , sports in the nature help you often to forget about it even if its just for a few minutes.

Olympia Center on the 3rd of July: a man doing rock climbing on his own. Conquering height alone in the middle of a city creates a new sensation: it drags one out of the urban context and resembles to an extent the experience of conquering mountains.

Michaelibad Freibad on the 29th of June: A great day at the swimmingpool: a man jumping from the ten metres diving tower. Feeling power and joy at the same time makes that jump a perfect experience!

A bikeway near the Candidbrücke following the Isar on the 28th of June: Everyday bikers on their way to work, excited young men going to the mountainbiketrial near this bridge and families with two little kids cycling to a sunbathing spot. No matter what age, you have the possibility to take a bike and go faster than by foot to your destination.

The english garden on the 4th of July: Disabled people do have to deal with motions their whole life in a totally other way than abled people. Voluntary? Probably not always...You can see that this woman has to put a lot effort in moving her wheelchair and this not for the last time in her life.